AIAA Kickoff

On September 8, AIAA at ISU kicked off the semester with an introductory event for new and returning students alike. The night was filled with information about various opportunities within aerospace at Iowa State University, such as rocketry teams, honors societies, and flight clubs, as well as the ability for students to meet and network with others in aerospace engineering. Additionally, pizza and refreshments were served, and the night was capped off with a showing of Top Gun Maverick. Overall, the night provided information for students and helped create community within Iowa State's aerospace department.

Resume Review

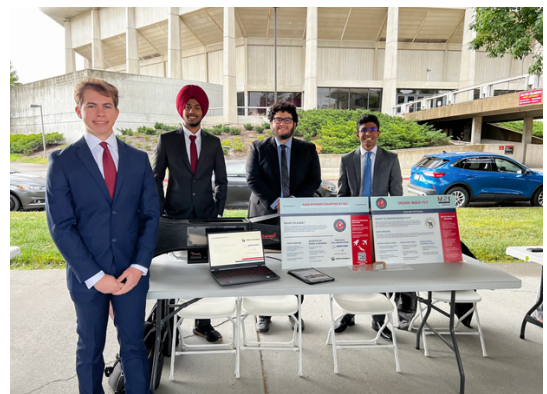

On September 12, AIAA hosted a resume review in light of the engineering careers fairs which took place in the subsequent weeks. Over 60 students attended, excited to refine their resumes, regardless of if this was their first career fair, or one of many they've attended. A panel of students in leadership looked over resumes and helped with developing key words, setting up proper organization, and making the most out of students' experience and qualifications. Additionally, the close working environment of the event allowed for the development of relationships and formation of connections within the chapter.

AIAA at the Reverse Career Fair

On September 19, AIAA attended the first reverse career fair at Iowa State University. This unique opportunity allowed employers to learn more about clubs and their students. At this event, we were able to meet many professionals, and discussed what we do at Iowa State, as well as the potential of partnerships in the future. Overall, this opportunity was greatly appreciated by AIAA, as it allowed us to shrink the gap between students and the industry, which is what AIAA is all about.

Collins New Spacesuit Talk

On September 25, Julie Strickland, a Subcontracts Program Manager at Collins Aerospace in Houston, gave a detailed presentation on her experience at Collins, what Collins is doing in their new age spacesuit program, and about the aerospace profession in general. At the end, she opened up for a very insightful Q&A session. We are very appreciative of Julie, and of any opportunity we have so hear and learn from aerospace engineering professionals. If you or anyone you know would be interested in sharing what you have done in your profession, please contact our Social Events Chair, Ramit Krishnan, at ramit@iastate.edu.
